

green
the gene

WHO WE ARE

Green the Gene is an international completely youth-run, non-profit environmental organisation, founded in 2004 by a small group of passionate, determined, and concerned youth. Today, with 19 year old Founder & President Madhav Datt, we are successfully building a global grassroots movement for positive environmental action-through over 7000 children and youth volunteers from schools and universities across 62 countries, making us the world's largest completely youth run environmental non-profit.

WHAT WE DO

10 years ago, when Green the Gene started out as an environmental club in Faridabad, India, we took up small scale projects involving our school and community. Today, Green the Gene's team is on youth panels for environmental policy making on inter-governmental levels, however, even today, on-ground initiatives and youth mobilization actions remain right at the heart of our work, all over the world.

WHAT WE ARE LOOKING FOR

Within Green the Gene we are in constant need of voluntary help in all fields of work, varying from project management, to fundraising, communications, and all other issues we come up with. Due to challenges of our projects, the constant changing needs, and the pressing need for youth-led environmental action, we encourage everybody to join us, even if you have no experience.

We are looking for dedicated people with a passion for the environment. Because of the innovative background of our projects we are looking for enthusiastic and talented people for our organization. We often need help in all areas of expertise, so if you want to help in any way, please fill out the application form (bit.ly/joingtgtg) and let us know you are available.

To join Green the Gene, you must be under the age of 24, and be willing to offer your expertise and help on a voluntary basis.

WHY JOIN US

Apart from joining and leading change at this global movement for environment protection and climate change, joining us will also be an excellent learning experience, with a host of opportunities.

"Making it to Stanford was really a dream come true. What played a major part in getting me there, was Green the Gene. Everything, from the chance I got, to handle worldwide projects to the reference letter, helped. I have been associated with the organisation for about 7 years now and it has been a wonderful journey. I am now building our team at Stanford, and California."

- Woo Cho (Green the Gene Korea and Stanford, Class of 2016)

"Recently, I got to represent India and Green the Gene at the 1st World Youth Sustainability Summit, Berlin, Germany, where I got to interact with activists, policy makers, industry leaders. I got to visit a lot of countries, meet people from different cultures and gain a lot of international exposure."

- Akshat Singhal (Green the Gene India)

At Green the Gene, you would get to work with diverse teams of young volunteers, as you initiate and manage large, innovative global projects. Gain leadership skills as you run a local or national organization, while making a positive impact.

Get international exposure by representing your country and Green the Gene at conferences, global summits and workshops from all across the world, as you get to meet and learn from global activists, law makers, business and youth leaders.

We appreciate your effort and contribution, and are always happy to give letters of recommendation and reference.

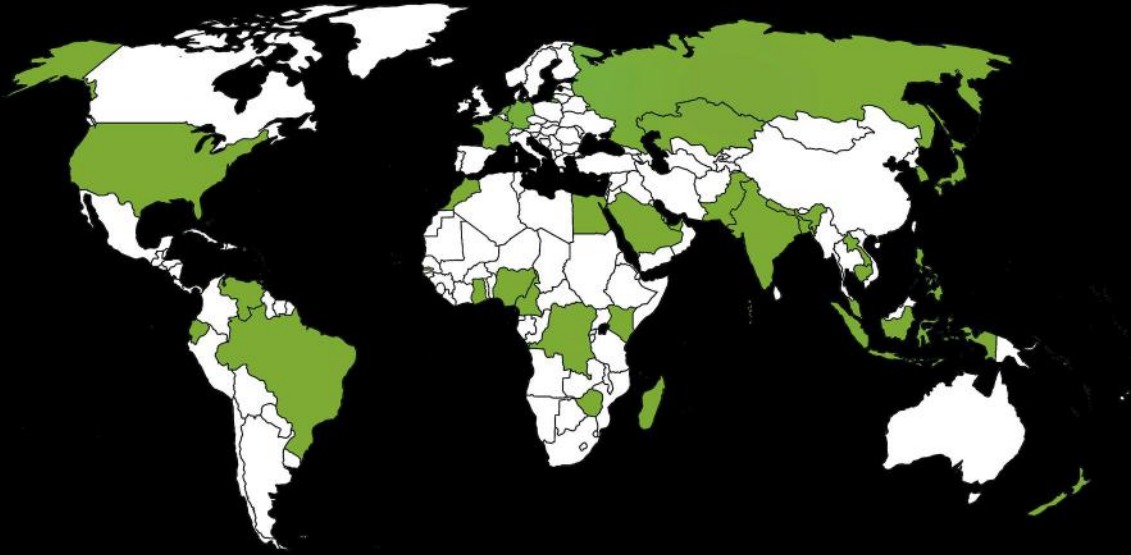

"Our destiny is what we make of it. We cannot exploit the resources of the future for today's progress. Environmental apathy must be done away with. We, the youth, must take the lead and chart the course of sustainability, without any half-measures."

- Kehkashan Basu (Green the Gene UAE)

GTG TRIVIA

- Founded in 2004, by four, 8 year olds from Eicher School in Faridabad, India.
- Over 7000 active volunteers and members, from ages 12 to 24, in 62 countries.
- On-ground grassroot projects - from planting 1.5 million trees in Gambia to recycling over a million liters of water annually in India.
- Out on the streets - mass mobilizations like the Wake up Call and People's Climate March.
- Representing and involving children and youth in international environment policy-making at the UN since 2009.
- Winners of two Volvo Adventure Awards & two Youth Environmentalist of the Year Titles. Recipients of the Commonwealth Youth Award for Excellence in Development Work, 2015.

GET INVOLVED

SORRY FOR THE INCONVENIENCE

WE ARE TRYING TO CHANGE THE WORLD

CONTACT US

Find out more about what we do, our ongoing campaigns, and how you could become a part of this youth movement towards a better, sustainable environment.

Find us at -

www.greenthene.org

www.fb.com/greenthene

JOIN + VOLUNTEER

bit.ly/joiningt

To know more -

Contact Harshul Bansal

greenthene@gmail.com

